Commanding officers will parade their respective commands in State service uniforms, hairy marching order; fatigue cap and blouse to be packed in knapsack.

The examining board of the 1st Brigade seems to have more business than it can readily attend to. First Lieutenant Cleveland, of Company B, 6th Regiment, who was elected nearly two months ago, has not yet been ordered before the board. The Governor has the power to designate the field officers of each regiment to examining boards to pass upon the qualifications of officers seeking commissions in them, and many think that he should do so. It is argued in support of this that boards so constituted would be the best judges of the propriety of passing candidates and would have the deepest interest in securing good officers. There is apparently too much business in the eight regiments and two batteries constituting the brigade for one board to attend to promptly.

A correspondent writing from Gettysburg inquires "How many men will it take to cover a line eight miles in length, two ranks deep, and how many officers, allowing thirty-four to each regiment? Upton's Tactics prescribe twenty-two inches as the breadth of each man in a battalion of infantry in line of battle, twenty-four yards at the interval between regiments, of which there should be four in a brigade, and one hundred yards between brigades if there are brigades placed between them. Each division consists of three brigades and two batteries. An army corps consists of three divisions of the line, a brigade of artillery and a regiment of cavalry. The distance between divisions varies according to the conformation of the ground, and other circumstances. The correspondent, bearing in mind that there are 5,280 men in a mile, can readily answer his own question on this subject thus presented."

First Lieutenant Robert Warrell, of Company F, 6th Regiment, has tendered his resignation. He is going to Newark to settle in business. Second Lieutenant William H. Ehrman, of the same company, will probably be promoted to fill the vacancy thus caused. Lieutenant Warrell entered as a private in Company F, 22d Regiment, December 21, 1880. He was made a second lieutenant in the 6th Regiment, June 11, 1883, and first lieutenant November 10 of the same year.

The resignations of the following officers of the National Guard have been accepted: Captain Frederick Klawz, 11th Regiment; Captain William P. Cough, 4th Regiment; First Lieutenant James W. Gorard, Jr., 12th Regiment; Captain George R. Van Dusen, chaplain of the 22d Regiment; Second Lieutenant Forbes, 20d Regiment; Captain Fred C. Cooley, 23d Regiment; First Lieutenant J. Harry Sutcliffe, 13th Regiment; Second Lieutenant William J. Gorard, 11th Regiment; Captain James E. Pace, 1st Regiment; Captain John J. Conroy, assistant surgeon of the 10th Regiment; Major A. W. Ford, surgeon of the 6th Regiment; First Lieutenant Elmer E. Stews, 14th Regiment; First Lieutenant William Broome, 71st Regiment; Second Lieutenant James G. McMurry, 6th Regiment, and Sub-prefectary First Lieutenant DeWitt C. Aney.

In a circular announcing that the new history of the 6th Regiment is now in the hands of the publishers and will soon be issued, Colonel Seward says:

The 6th Regiment has a history of which its members, past and present, have a just right to be proud.

They can enjoy the privilege of giving expression to this praiseworthy past, and advantage of the present opportunity to perpetuate it for all.

A committee of the regiment of General George A. Hovey is chairman, who have engaged a long time in this work, giving freely of their time and money to facilitate its progress, their sole ambition and stimulus being the desire that the members and their friends should have the privilege of becoming fully acquainted with the honorable and glorious record of the 6th Regiment.

It is for the members of the organization to now show their appreciation of these labors and expenditures by sending their names to their several company commanders as subscribers. September 10 the committee had a meeting to hear the reports from the members of the regiment before that date, and accordingly hope to see the names of at least ten per cent of the members of the regiment in full, and those indicated, and by the time it is issued every member should be recorded for a volume. The several company commanders have been provided with blanks, and each receipt of this circular application should suffice to make them, so that by the date above mentioned the results may be announced.

The 6th Regiment is ordered to Creedmoor for rifle practice on September 27. The men have improved greatly during the last year, and it is expected that excellent work will be done at the range.

Pursuant to orders from the Chief of Ordnance, commanding officers of the 6th Regiment are directed by Colonel Cavanagh to immediately return to the regimental quartermasters the knapsacks, haversacks and canteens loaned to them previous to going to the State Camp.

The 1st Battalion, Captain Louis Wendel, will have a meeting and drill at the Armory next Friday evening, it begins the season with 110 men on the rolls. Sergeant calls will open the prize at the recent shooting match at Lion Park.

Captain Stephen P. Ryan, of Company G, 6th Regiment, will be the President of the Delinquency Court which will be ordered to convene at the Armory next week for the trial of members of the command who were absent from camp during the recent tour of duty.

Battalions in the 2d Battery, Captain Ferdinand P. Earle, will begin on September 15. The command is in excellent condition and has 101 names on the roll besides many applications for members. The men will have an opportunity to show what they can do before the targets at Creedmoor in October.

Company F, 71st Regiment, will have an outdoor drill during the present month. The resignation of Captain Dressel, who has done much to improve the company during the short time that he has had command of it, is greatly regretted by his men.

An election will soon be ordered in Company H, 6th Regiment, for a captain in place of W. R. Cough, resigned, and for a second lieutenant in place of Jones Macomber, promoted to the position of first Lieutenant. Lieutenant Macomber and Frank A. Gale, formerly first lieutenant of the company, are candidates for the captaincy. A second lieutenant of one of the other companies of the regiment will probably be chosen as the second lieutenant of Company H.

A history of the old second company of the 7th Regiment is being prepared by a committee appointed for that purpose, and will be published soon. Company B has an excellent record and furnished many officers to the volunteer regiments during the war.

Captain John D. Walton, of Company D, 6th Regiment, has not yet been ordered before the examining board. Second Lieutenant Wainhouse, Lynn will be made first lieutenant in his place as soon as he gets an commission as captain.

Captain Paxton, of the 7th Regiment, is expected home from Europe in time to conduct the services in his church on Sunday, September 16. He will receive a hearty welcome home from the men of the command, with whom he is popular, after his long vacation.

Company B, 22d Regiment, has appointed a committee to look for a captain. Captain J. G. R. Leland, of Company C, who has been ill for two weeks, has entirely recovered.
